

A geologist wearing a cap, sunglasses, and a high-visibility vest is standing on a sandy dune. He is holding a surveying instrument (a total station) mounted on a tripod. The background shows a sandy dune with some sparse vegetation under a blue sky with clouds.

Ever wonder what it's like to work for a State Geological Survey? Why not come find out!

Workin' on the beach

Wednesday, Sept. 28th, 4:30 pm
143/144 Brown Hall

Life as a summer intern for the
Maine Geological Survey

By Kyle Marvinney