Collaboration Across the Arts

---

Thursday, December 11, 2003
8:00pm
Gilbert Recital Hall

Offered jointly by the departments of music, speech and theatre, and fine arts, "Collaboration Across the Arts" is a new course that provides students from different backgrounds the opportunity to work together on creative projects of their own design. The direction of the course is determined to a great extent by the unique combination of students who participate. This semester's students have been working on projects that combine image and sound.

Class time was spent on a variety of activities: learning to use digital media technologies, viewing example works, discussing works-in-progress, and exploring various issues pertinent to technology-based art and collaborative processes. I hope the students learned as much as I did.

I am looking forward to offering this course again in the near future. I am excited about finding new ways the Arts Technology Center can be used to create opportunities for our students in the arts and across campus. I welcome your ideas and suggestions.
